PREFACE

In the Encyclopedia of French Film Directors, I have attempted to identify every French director who had made at least one feature film during the first century of cinema (1895–2005). From undisputed masters to obscure one-timers, nearly 3,000 directors are cited here, including at least 200 filmmakers not mentioned in similar books published in France.

Filmmakers of nearly every form and genre of cinema are represented in the following pages, including silent-era directors, animators, documentarians, and avant-garde auteurs working on Super 8 and on video. The only category of filmmakers I didn't retain is "porn directors" (or, more precisely, directors known mostly as specialists of that kind of production), not by excess of puritanism but because establishing their accurate filmographies is not possible (many French porn flicks of the 1980s were compilations of scenes taken from other films). Of course, every rule has its exceptions, and I couldn't ignore such names as José Benazeraf, Francis Leroi, Jean-François Davy, or Claude Mulot, who became famous as pornographers but also signed comedies, "films noir," and fantastic movies. In the mid-1970s and until the 1980s, a dozen of other French "mainstream directors" shot "blue movies." I have mentioned this period of their career in the biographical text dedicated to them, but I didn't include X-rated pictures in their filmographies.

Most of the directors listed here are French born, but I have also included many filmmakers of foreign descent definitively based or living for many years in France and notably those—Africans, Asians, Americans, or Europeans—who had filmed a qualitatively or quantitatively essential part of their work in the old country, where Jean Renoir was born. For instance, there was the case of American Jules Dassin, who gave to French cinema a film noir masterpiece in 1955 (Du Rififi chez les Hommes/USA: Rififi). Conversely, such filmmakers as Robert Florey or Jean-Marie Straub and Danièle Huillet, who worked mainly abroad (in the United States and Germany/Italy, respectively), could hardly be considered "French directors" and are not listed in my book.

I insist on the fact that the Encyclopedia of French Film Directors is the most comprehensive book ever dedicated to French filmmakers. For the first time, all TV works and shorts of each director are mentioned. Either by disinterest or more probably by lack of pages, my predecessors ignored these important parts of directors' careers. Even if this encyclopedia aims at exhaustivity, I know that omissions and errors are inevitable. I invite any reader who wishes to send me criticisms, comments, or corrections to contact me in care of my publisher.

Entries are presented in alphabetical order. Each of them contains brief biographical summary, including dates and places of birth and death, information on the individual's education and professional training, and other details, such as real names (when the filmmaker uses a pseudonym). Unfortunately, some vital dates could not be found, especially for a few silent-era directors. Most of the biographies mention filmmakers' extra directorial credits (complete when the person is mainly a director; selective for the actors, cinematographers, editors, screenwriters, playwrights, novelists, journalists, or composers who tried their luck behind the camera).

The entries also provide complete filmographies, including credits for feature films, shorts, documentaries, and TV work. The heading "Filmography" indicates that what follows is a complete list of directorial credits. All movies and TV productions completed before December 31, 2008, are included in filmographies. Dates given with movie titles are almost always the years of first release in the country in which they originate. For unreleased films, however, the date reflects the year of production. When the release and production dates differ from more than twelve months, the year the movie was filmed is indicated in parentheses. All the movies shot after 1918 are classified in chronological order of release. In the absence of reliable release dates, silent movies filmed before 1918 (mostly short films) are presented in alphabetical order.

A slash separating titles in the credits means that what follows is a list of alternate titles. When the movie is not of French origin or is the result of a co-production between two or more countries, the foreign titles are mentioned, and the abbreviated names of concerned nations appeared in parentheses. Movies released in the United Kingdom and the United States are also identified by their English and/or American titles.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

ABBOU, KARIM (February 27, 1968, Puteaux, Hauts-de-Seine, France–) and AYD, KADER (December 31, 1976, Nanterre, Hauts-de-Seine, France–)

After entering in films as an actor in a short (Au Bout de la Nuit la Liberté, 1995), Kader Ayd co-wrote with Samy Nacéri his first directing effort in 1997 (Qui paiera les Dégats?). He met the same year Karim Abbou, an author for comedians Elie Semoun and Elie Kakou. They co-directed two feature films.

Filmography

- 1997 Qui paiera les Dégats? (short; Kader Ayd only; also co-screenwriter)
- 2000 Old School (also co-screenwriter, co-dialogist, actor)
- 2005 Ennemis publics (also co-screenwriter, co-dialogist, actor)

ABEILLON, LIONEL (February 26, 1976, Toulouse, Haute-Garonne, France–)

After completing his studies (cinema and audiovisual bachelor's degree, Art Section, University of Paris VIII, cinema master's degree—thesis: The American Screenwriters, University of Paris VIII, and an arts bachelor's degree, University of Paris X, Nanterre), he did military service in the French army's Cinematographic Service. He entered films as production assistant and production manager within Les Films du Kiosque.

Filmography

- 1997 La Première Fois (short; also screenwriter, dialogist)
- 2004 Comme un seul Homme (also co-screenwriter, co-dialogist)
- 2005 Eux seuls (medium-length; also co-screenwriter, co-dialogist)

ABITBOL, JUDITH (December 17, 1958, Casablanca, Morocco–)

A movie buff from her childhood, she filmed more than 200 Super-8 shorts in her teenage years (1971–1982). She studied arts and cinema at the Sorbonne. After graduating, she worked in films as trainee and then assistant editor (1979–1982). In 1997, she created the film production company Chaz Productions.

Filmography

- 1980 27 / 12 / 80 5 Heures d'Atelier (Super-8-mm short)
- 1983 Le Navire (16-mm short)

ABOULKER, MARCEL (Paul Marcel Samuel Aboulker / January 1, 1905, Algiers, Algeria–September 12, 1952, Garches, Hauts-de-Seine, France)

Born of a great dynasty from Algiers, he was a member of a partisan group that prepared the American debarkation in Africa. On D-day he was among the fighters who took control of Algiers against Vichy forces. Having graduated from Ecole Polytechnique, he created several successful radio programs broadcast by Le Poste Parisien. He was an assistant to director Roger Richebé for one movie (1938 Prison de Femmes / USA: Marked Girls) before turning to film directing. He wrote a book on the liberation of Algiers (Alger et ses Complots, Les Documents Nuit et Jour, 1945).

Filmography

- 1939 En Correctionnelle (short; also screenwriter)
- 1940 Les Surprises de la Radio (as Marcel-Paul)
- 1948 Les Aventures des Pieds Nickelés (also co-adapter)

ACHARD, MARCEL (July 5, 1899, Sainte-Foy-les-Lyon, France–September 4, 1974, Paris, France)

A former teacher and journalist, he wrote his first play in 1922 and soon became one of the most renowned French Boulevard playwrights. Jean de la Lune, Domino, Noix de Coco, and Patate are probably his most known and successful works. From 1931 (Jean de la Lune; Jean Choux and Michel Simon) to 1964 (Patate; Robert Thomas), he wrote or co-wrote screenplays and dialogues of about forty films (including La Veuve Joyeuse, the French version of Ernst Lubitsch's The Merry Widow, 1934, and Max Ophüls's Madame de ... / Gioielli di Madame de ... / UK: Diamond Earrings / USA: The Earrings of Madame de ..., France / Italy, 1953). A long time before being elected at the French Academy (1959) and appearing as himself in Goodbye Again / Aimez-vous Brahms? (Anatole Litvak, USA / France, 1961), he played in two "avant-garde" films (Entr'acte, René Clair, 1924, and Traité de Bave et d'Eternité / USA: Venom and Eternity, Isidore Isou, 1951).

Filmography

- 1935 Folies-Bergère (also screenwriter, adapter, dialogist; French-language version of Roy Del Ruth's Folies-Bergeres)
- 1943 Les Deux Timides (uncredited; co-director with Yves Allégret; shot in 1941)
- 1949 Jean de la Lune (also screenwriter, dialogist)
- 1950 La Valse de Paris (also screenwriter, dialogist)

ADAM, JEAN-FRANÇOIS (Jean-François Albert Hermant Abraham-Adam / February 14, 1938, Paris, France–October 14, 1980, Paris, France)

He was a stage actor and played supporting roles in a few movies (1961 Tire-au-Flanc 62 / USA: The Army Game, Claude de Givray, François Truffaut; 1962 L'Amour à Vingt Ans / L'amore a vent'anni / Liebe mit zwanzig / Hitachi no koi / Milosc dwudziestolatkow / USA: Love at Twenty / Segment "Antoine et Colette," François Truffaut, France / Italy / West Germany / Japan) before moving behind the cameras as an assistant director (1963 La Belle Vie / UK: The Good Life, Robert Enrico; 1964 La Peau douce / Angustia / USA: The Soft Skin, François Truffaut, France / Portugal; 1966 Le Deuxième Souffle / UK and USA: Second Breath, Jean-Pierre Melville, 1966; L'Armée des Ombres / L'armata degli eroi / UK and USA: Army in the Shadows / The Shadow Army, France / Italy, 1969). He turned out his first feature as a director in 1970, but the film was released only three years later. He still appeared in a few movies (1968 Baisers volés / USA: Stolen Kisses, François Truffaut; 1974 Le Secret / Il segreto / UK and USA: The Secret, Robert Enrico, France / Italy; 1979 Passe ton Bac d'abord / UK and USA: Graduate First, Maurice Pialat). He committed suicide at age forty-two. His wife (from 1966) was French actress Brigitte Fossey. He was the father of actress Marie Adam (born in 1968).

Filmography

- 1973 "M" comme Mathieu (shot in 1970)
- 1976 Le Jeu du Solitaire (also screenwriter, adapter, dialogist)
- 1979 Retour à la bien-aimée (also co-screenwriter, co-adapter, co-dialogist)

ADAM, RAYMOND (April 22, 1941, Hué, Vietnam—)

A true globe-trotter, he went to Paris in order to complete his studies before traveling around the world as a sound engineer and director of TV programs on ethnical minorities for ORTF (name of French TV in the 1960s and early 1970s).

Filmography

- 1986 Pygmées / Koumba, Dieu des Pygmées (also dialogist, producer; shot in 1984)

ADJADJ, MARC

He is above all a stage actor and director. From 1983 to 2000, he created several troupes (1983–1984: Calypto Théâtre, 1989: Association Vagabond) and taught acting in various workshops.

Filmography

- 1985 Pour quelques je t'aime de plus (short; also screenwriter)
- 1993 La Blonde est de retour (short; also screenwriter)

ALBICOCCO, JEAN-GABRIEL (Jean-Gabriel Fernand Joseph Albicocco / February 15, 1936, Cannes, Alpes-Maritimes, France—April 10, 2001, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil)

The son of art photographer and cinematographer Quinto Albicocco, he was still a child when he began to photograph. At age twelve, he presented his first amateur film to the Prince of Monaco. Settled in Paris, he had an excellent teacher (his father) and learned the job of cameraman working on several shorts (1953 La Dôt de Sylvie, Armand Chartier; 1954 Croissance de Paris, Marcel Gibaud; 1955 Une Lettre pour vous, André Vetusto; 1961 Madame se meurt, Jean Cayrol, Claude Durand). Then he took part in a polar expedition with documentary director Marcel Ichac. He was briefly an assistant director (1957 Celui qui doit mourir / Colui che deve morire / USA: He Who Must Die, Jules Dassin, France / Italy; Pas de Grisbi pour Ricardo, Henry Lepage). After his military service in the French army's Cinematographic Service, he directed in 1959 shorts for US TV (Bonsoir). In 1961 he married the young star of his first feature film, Marie Laforêt. Discouraged by the commercial and critic failures of his last works, he left France in the early 1980s for settling in Brazil, a country he discovered when he wrote and produced two Pierre Kast shorts (1968 Bandeira Branca de Oxala; 1969 Macumba, documentary). Unfortunately, he died totally forgotten and penniless in his new country. In June 1968, he co-created the French Directors Society (SRF) and, the following year, the Cannes Film Festival's Quinzaine des Réalisateurs.

ALLÉGRET, MARC (December 23, 1900, Basle, Basel-Stadt, Switzerland–November 3, 1973 Paris, France)

The son of a preacher and brother of future director Yves Allégret, he studied law at the Ecole des Sciences Politiques. From the age of seventeen, he admired writer André Gide, a friend and protector of his family who soon became his spiritual father. Thanks to Gide, he met the greatest artists and poets of his time (Picasso, Paul Valéry, Man Ray, Jean Cocteau, Erik Satie, Saint-Exupéry, Joseph Kessel). When he accompanied Gide on his trip to Africa, he filmed the journey. After shooting several shorts, he became assistant director to Robert Florey (1932 L'Amour chante, also production designer) and Augusto Genina. When Florey had to go to the USA without having time to finish Le Blanc et le Noir, he completed the movie. He is known as an actor's discoverer (Fernandel, Simone Simon, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Jean-Louis Barrault, Gérard Philipe, Danièle Delorme, Brigitte Bardot, Jean-Paul Belmondo). He played a supporting part in a film directed by his former assistant Roger Vadim (1961 Et mourir de plaisir / Il sangue e la rosa / UK and USA: Blood and Roses; France / Italy).

ANNAUD, JEAN-JACQUES (October 1, 1944, Juvisy-sur-Orge, Essonne, France—)

After graduating from Vaugirard film school (B.T.S. cinema) in 1962, he shot an amateur short (Les 7 Péchés capitaux du Cinéaste) and completed a degree in letters before completing his training at the IDHEC directing section (1964). He landed a job of assistant on a commercial and hardly earned his living as a messenger for Paris-Match magazine. During his military service in Cameroon, he reorganized the cinema department and trained technicians. In Africa, he also directed educational films. Back to Paris, he became one of the busiest and most rewarded international directors of commercials (about eighty films a year from 1966 to 1976). His first feature film was a commercial failure in France until it won the Academy Award as best foreign film for 1977 and was released again under a new title. He co-wrote the dialogue of a Pierre Richard's comedy (1978 Je suis timide . . . mais je me soigne) and co-authored the original story of Running Free (Sergei Bodrov, USA, 1999).

ANOUILH, JEAN (June 23, 1910, Bordeaux, Gironde, France—October 3, 1987, Lausanne, Switzerland)

In the late 1920s, he studied law for a few months before joining an advertising company, Damour, where he met poet Jacques Prévert, future screenwriter Jean Aurenche, painter Max Ernst, and cartoonist Paul Grimault. He co-wrote some commercials and co-authored with Aurenche his first plays (Humulus le Muet and La Mandarine). He quit his job at Damour and was hired as an administrator at the Comédie des Champs-Élysées, a famous theater managed by actor-director Louis Jouvet. In 1932, he wrote his first play (L'Hermine) and soon became one of the most praised and successful playwrights of his time. Most of his works (Antigone, Medea, Colombe, Léocadia, Pauvre Bitos, L'Alouette, L'Hurluberlu) have been staged on the five continents and became films or TV movies. Two of them have been brought to the screen by British directors John Guillermin (1962 The Waltz of the Toreadors) and Peter Glenville (1964 Becket). From 1936 (Vous n'avez rien à déclarer? / USA: Confessions of a Newlywed, Léo Joannon) to 1970 (Time for Loving, Christopher Miles, UK), he also wrote screenplays and dialogues of about twenty movies, including Monsieur Vincent (Maurice Cloche, 1947), Pattes blanches / UK and USA: White Paws (Jean Grémillon), and Caroline Chérie / USA: Dear Caroline (Richard Pottier). The first feature film he directed was an adaptation of one his most successful plays. His daughter Catherine (1934–1989) was a stage actress.

ANTOINE, ANDRÉ (Léonard André Antoine / January 31, 1858, Limoges, Haute-Vienne, France–October 19, 1943, Le Pouliguen, Loire-Atlantique, France)

A former gas company employee, he dedicated his life to the stage from 1887, the year he created with a few amateur friends the Théâtre-Libre (known as Théâtre Antoine since 1897). An adept of a naturalist aesthetic, he broke many dramatic conventions and totally renewed contemporary theater, influencing the greatest French stage directors of the twentieth century (Firmin Gémier, Charles Dullin, Sacha Pitoëff, Jacques Copeau, Jean Vilar) and such filmmakers as Jacques Feyder, Jean Renoir, Marcel Pagnol, and Jean Grémillon. In 1914, he entered films as an assistant director to Albert Capellani, who was his collaborator onstage. He appeared as himself in Ceux de chez nous / USA: Those of Our Land (Sacha Guitry, 1915). His son, André-Paul Antoine (1892–1982), was a playwright and a screenwriter.

APPREDERIS, FRANCK (April 26, 1940, Saint-Georges-des-Côteaux, Charente-Maritime, France—)

He abandoned a career in advertising in the Havas company to become an assistant director to Cinéastes Associés (1976 Cours après moi que je t'attrape / USA: Run After Me Until I Catch You, Robert Pouret). After taking and succeeding in the ORTF (French TV at the time) competitive examination, he sporadically worked as assistant director on TV movies and TV series. At the same time, he directed institutional shorts before filming motion pictures. He also directed plays (1987 Un Citoyen exemplaire, J. P. Blanc; 1991 Lettres d'une Inconnue, also adapter, Stefan Zweig) and co-wrote an episode from the La Mondaine TV series (1995 "La Madonne de Lisbonne," Maurice Frydland) and a TV movie (1998 Un Camion pour Deux / Eine gefährliche Mission, Dominique Trabuteau, France / Germany / Hungary).

ARDOUIN, JACQUES (November 6, 1937, Paris, France–August 21, 2002, Quincy-Sous-Sénart, Essonne, France)

After his studies at the center of dramatic art of the Rue Blanche, he joined the National Conservatory of Paris and started a satisfying double career as actor and stage director. Unfortunately, his contribution to cinema was less interesting. He mostly played in lowbrow Richard Balducci’s comedies (1981 Prends ta Rolls . . . et va pointer; 1982 N’oublie pas ton Père au Vestiaire) and a few average films (1972 Il n’y a pas de Fumée sans Feu / Non c’è fuomo senza fuoco / UK and USA: Where There’s No Smoke, André Cayatte, France / Italy; 1974 Le Protecteur / Trafico de mujeres, Roger Hanin, France / Spain; 1975 Le Faux Cul, Roger Hanin; 1980 La Boum / USA: The Party, Claude Pinoteau). The only movie he directed was a boulevard comedy.

ARNAUD, MICHÈLE (Micheline Caré / March 18, 1919, Toulon, Var, France–March 30, 1998, Maisons-Laffitte, Yvelines, France)

Parallel to her studies of literature and law, she frequented such cabarets as Le Tabou and La Rose Rouge. She made her debut as singer at Milord l'Arsouille in 1952. In the early 1960s, she switched to production for TV (1963 Les Raisins verts, variety show, also co-screenwriter, Jean-Christophe Averty; 1966–1968 Tilt Magazine, variety show, Pierre Desfons, Jean-Pierre Spiero; 1967 Anna, TV movie, Pierre Korálnik) and films (1972 Pink Floyd: Live at Pompeii / Pink Floyd à Pompéii / Pink Floyd in Pompeii / Pink Floyd / USA: Echoes: Pink Floyd, as associate producer, Adrian Maben, France / Belgium / West Germany; 1976 Oskar Kokoschka, documentary, as associate producer, Gianpaolo Tescari; 1978 Monsieur René Magritte / USA: Magritte, documentary, medium-length, Adrian Maben, West Germany / France). She appeared as herself in half a dozen episodes of Ni Figue ni Raisin (1964–1965) and in a musical TV short (1965 Seul à Seul / Onder vier ogen, Serge Leroy, Belgium). Her son is former singer Dominique Waller (b. 1942), and her daughter is photographer Florence Gruère (b. 1943).

ASTRUC, ALEXANDRE (July 13, 1923, Paris, France—)

The son of a writer and journalist father and a drawer mother, he had a passion for mathematics and literature that first led him to attend a preparatory school for Polytechnique, but he finally opted for other studies. After acquiring degrees in literature and law from the Sorbonne University during the Occupation, he befriended writer and poet Jean Lescuré, who introduced him to the world of arts and letters. He met Jean-Paul Sartre, Martin Heidegger, and Boris Vian and gave texts to literary reviews (Poésie 42, Confluences). In 1945, he published his first novel (1945 Les Vacances, Editions Gallimard). A journalist and sometimes editorialist for daily newspapers (France-Dimanche, Combat, Action), he was also a film critic and theoretician writing for Objectif 49, La Nef, L'Écran Français, Les Temps modernes, and Les Cahiers du Cinéma. He remains famous for his theory of “Caméra-Stylo” (camera-pen), expounded in the March 1948 issue of L'Écran Français, which affirmed that cinema was becoming a means of expression like the other arts and a language, “a means of writing just as flexible as the written language.” He made his debut behind the camera as a second assistant director to Marc Allégret (Blanche Fury, UK). Then he directed two 16-mm amateur shorts and landed a job of first assistant director and adapter (1949 Jean de la Lune, Marcel Achard). He co-adapted Jean-Paul Sartre’s play La P... respectueuse / UK and USA: The Respectful Prostitute (Charles Brabant, 1952) and collaborated on the script of a Franco-Italian swashbuckling play from Alexandre Dumas, Le Vicomte de Bragelonne / Il Visconte di Bragelonne / USA: The Last Musketeer / Count of Bragelonne, Fernando Cerchio). As a director, he often adapted great authors (Maupassant, Poe, Barbey d’Aurevilly, Flaubert). He appeared in several documentaries as himself (1949 Désordre, Jacques Barattier; 1967 Cinéastes de notre Temps, TV documentary, segment “Alexandre Astruc, l’Ascendant Taureau”; 1974 Histoires du cinéma français par ceux qui l’ont fait, Armand Panigol; 1993 François Truffaut / Portraits volés

/ UK and USA: François Truffaut: Stolen Portraits, Michel Pascal and Serge Toubiana) and feature films (1949 Rendez-vous de Juillet, Jacques Becker; 1950 La Valse de Paris, Marcel Achard; 1957 Un Amour de Poche / UK: Nude in the Pocket / USA: Nude in His Pocket, Pierre Kast; 1974 La Jeune Fille assassinée / Una vita bruciata / Ein wildes Leben / USA: Charlotte). Other works include 1964 Bassae (as author of commentary; documentary; short; Jean-Daniel Pollet), 1980 Comme le Temps passe (as co-screenwriter, co-adapter, co-dialogist; Alain Levent), 1981 Frère Martin (as co-screenwriter, co-adapter, co-dialogist; TV movie; Jean Delannoy), and 2001 Les Âmes fortes (as co-screenwriter, co-adapter, co-dialogist; Raúl Ruiz).

AUBURTIN, FRÉDÉRIC (June 4, 1962, Marseille, Bouches-du-Rhône, France—)

After completing his studies of literature and cinema in Aix-en-Provence, he landed a job as a third assistant director to Robert Guédiguian (1985 Rouge Midi, shot in 1983). Working as an unit manager on Claude Berri's Jean de Florette and Manon des Sources / Manon delle sorgenti / USA: Manon of the Spring (1986, France / Italy), he won Gérard Depardieu's esteem. From 1986 to 1998, he collaborated as an assistant director on many movies in which the actor starred (1986 Les Fugitifs, Francis Veber; 1987 Sous le Soleil de Satan / USA: Under Satan's Sun / Under the Sun of Satan, Maurice Pialat; 1993 Germinal, Claude Berri, France / Belgium / Italy; 1998 The Man in the Iron Mask, Randall Wallace; UK / USA). In 1999, Depardieu asked him to co-direct Un Pont entre Deux Rives (he also composed the music for the film). He played small parts in Sous le Soleil de Satan, Un Amour de trop / USA: Sandra (Franck Landron, 1989), and L'Amant / UK: The Lover (Jean-Jacques Annaud, also assistant director).

AUDIARD, JACQUES (April 30, 1952, Paris, France—)

The son of screenwriter, dialogue author, and director Michel Audiard, he studied letters and philosophy at the Sorbonne thinking of teaching but was soon drawn to cinema as an assistant editor (1976 Le Locataire / The Tenant, Roman Polanski, France / USA; 1977 Le Passé simple / USA: Replay, Michel Drach; 1978 Judith Therpauve, Patrice Chéreau). He collaborated three times on scripts written by his father (1974 Bons Baisers... à Lundi, Michel Audiard; 1981 Le Professionnel / USA: The Professional, Georges Lautner; 1983 Mortelle Randonnée / UK: Deadly Run / USA: Deadly Circuit, Claude Miller) before becoming himself a full-fledged screenwriter. He wrote or co-authored the scripts and sometimes dialogues of about fifteen films, including Réveillon chez Bob (Denys Granier-Deferre, 1984), Poussière d'Ange (Edouard Niermans, 1987), Fréquence Meurtre (Elisabeth Rappeneau, 1988), Baxter (Jérôme Boivin, 1989), and Vénus Beauté (Institut) / UK: Venus Beauty Salon / USA: Venus Beauty Institute (Tonie Marshall, 1999). He made his debut behind the camera in 1993.

AUDIARD, MICHEL (Paul Michel Audiard / May 15, 1920, Paris, France–July 28, 1985, Dourdan, Essonne, France)

After dropping out of school at age sixteen, he was successively a racing cyclist, an optician, an arc welder, a newsboy, and a journalist and film critic under the pen name of Jacques Potier for magazines and newspapers (Cinévie, L'Etoile du Soir, Libération). In the mid-1940s, he wrote several pulp novels published by the Fleuve Noir. Producer and director André Hunebelle noticed them and asked him to write an adventure movie, Mission à Tanger (André Hunebelle, 1949), the first script of a list including more than 130 titles. In 1955, he met Jean Gabin on the set of a movie he wrote, Gas-Oil / USA: Gas Oil / Hi-Jack Highway (Gilles Grangier) and became his regular screenwriter (nineteen films from 1955 to 1968). The dialogues he put into the mouth of the greatest French film star in such motion pictures as Les Grandes Familles (Denys de La Patellière, 1958), Rue des Prairies / Mio figlio / USA: Rue de Paris (Denys de La Patellière, France / Italy, 1959), Le Président / Il Presidente / UK: The President (Henri Verneuil, France / Italy), and Le Cave se rebiffe / Il re dei flasari / UK: The Counterfeiters / USA: The Counterfeiters of Paris (Gilles Grangier, France / Italy, 1961) remain anthological. Some of the movies he collaborated on in the 1960s became cult favorite of several generations of French (especially Les Tontons flingueurs / In famiglia si spara / Mein Onkel, der Gangster / UK: Crooks in Clover / USA: Monsieur Gangster, Georges Lautner, 1963). Unfortunately, he never took directing seriously, and the movies he filmed were unworthy of his talent (except for some dialogues). He wrote several books in the 1960s (1968 Le Terminus des Prétentieux, Plon) and the 1970s (1975 Le P'tit Cheval de Retour, Julliard; Répète un peu ce que je viens de dire, Julliard). In 1978, after one of his sons' accidental death, he published a deeply moving account of his grief (La Nuit, le Jour et toutes les autres Nuits, Denoël). He died of cancer at age sixty-five.

AUDRY, JACQUELINE (September 25, 1908, Orange, Vaucluse, France–June 22, 1977, Poissy, Yvelines, France)

The great-niece of Gaston Doumergue, who was French president from 1924 to 1931, she was briefly an antiquarian before starting in films as a script girl in 1932. After working as an assistant director (1938 Le Roman de Werther / Werther, Max Ophüls; 1939 L'Esclave blanche / USA: Pasha's Wives, Marc Sorkin; Jeunes Filles en Détresse, G. W. Pabst; 1940 Les Musiciens du Ciel, Georges Lacombe; Elles étaient Douze Femmes, Georges Lacombe; Paris-New York, Yves Mirande, Claude Heymann; 1942 L'Assassin a peur la Nuit, Jean Delannoy), she directed a short, Les Chevaux du Vercors. She died in a car crash. Her husband, screenwriter and journalist Pierre Laroche (1902–1962), and her sister, writer and playwright Colette Audry (1906–1990), wrote several of her feature films.

AUREL, JEAN (November 6, 1925, Rasvolitza, Romania—August 26, 1996, Paris, France)

He was born in a train near Rasvolitza, a Romanian city. Having graduated from IDHEC, he was briefly a film critic for weekly review Arts. In 1948, he co-directed his first documentary short (Joan Miro). Following an experience of filmed news editor, he was assistant director to Augusto Genina (1955 Frou Frou / UK and USA: The Toy Wife, France / Italy; La figlia di Mata Hari / La Fille de Mata Hari / UK: Daughter of Mata Hari / USA: Mata Hari's Daughter, Carmine Gallone, Renzo Merusi, Italy / France). From 1956 (C'est arrivé à Aden, Michel Boisrond), he began a career of screenwriter working with such renowned directors as René Clair (1957 Porte des Lilas / Quartiere dei lilla / UK: Gate of Lilacs / USA: The Gates of Paris, France / Italy), Jacques Becker (Le Trou / Il buco / UK: The Hole / USA: The Watch, France / Italy), and later François Truffaut (1979 L'Amour en Fuite / UK and USA: Love on the Run; 1981 La Femme d'à Côté / UK and USA: The Woman Next Door; 1983 Vivement Dimanche / UK: Finally, Sunday / USA: Confidentially Yours). In 1961, he should have directed La Bride sur le Cou / A briglia sciolta / UK and USA: Please, Not Now! / USA: Only for Love, but he had to let Roger Vadim have his place after a few days of shooting. His first feature film was a documentary co-written by Cécil Saint-Laurent (14-18 / USA: Over There, 1963). He also played in two films (1973 Vivre ensemble, Anna Karina; 1974 La Bonzesse, François Jouffa).

AURIGNAC, PATRICK (June 30, 1965, France–May 16, 1997, Paris, France)

His acting career, started in 1983 (Le Voyage à Deauville, short, Jacques Duron), was interrupted by a first imprisonment. He took part in several holdups and spent a total of six years in jail. Spotted by talent agent Dominique Besnehard when he was still in the prison of Bois d'Arcy, he had a second chance and played in half a dozen films (1991 Sale comme un Ange, Catherine Breillat; 1992 Max et Jérémie, Claire Devers; 1992 La Fille de l'Air, Maroun Bagdadi; Max et Jérémie / UK and USA: Max et Jérémie, Claire Devers; 1993 Mensonge, François Margolin; 1994 A la Folie / UK and USA: Alice and Elsa / Six Days, Six Nights, Diane Kurys). In 1996, he directed an autobiographical film. One year later, he shot himself with a revolver.

AUSTEN, OLIVIER (1957, Marseille, Bouches-du-Rhône, France–)

After studying architecture at the Luminy Marseille University, he worked from age twenty-five to twenty-seven as a naval architect designer. A keen photographer since age fifteen, he exhibited his works at age nineteen. He entered films as unit manager (1986 Jean de Florette and Manon des Sources / Manon delle sorgenti / USA: Manon of the Spring, Claude Berri, France / Italy). He directed many commercials in Paris (1988–1993), Montreal (2002–2005), and New Zealand (2006). According to his own words, he is still a photographer, an architect, a designer, a painter, a screenwriter, a writer, and a director.

AUTANT-LARA, CLAUDE (August 5, 1901, Luzarches, Val-d'Oise, France–February 5, 2000, Antibes, Alpes-Maritimes, France)

The son of architect Edouard Autant and of the leading actress from the Comédie Française, Louise Lara, he followed his mother in her self-exile (she was a pacifist, and her opinion on World War I earned her such hate that she had to leave France until 1917). He spent two years at London Mill Hill School before returning to his native country. After completing his secondary education, he attended the National School of Decorative Arts and the Art School. In 1919, Marcel L'Herbier hired him to paint the sets of his film Le Carnaval des Vérités. Then he worked as art director and costume designer for L'Herbier again (1920 L'Homme du Large, in which also played a small part; Villa Destin, art director only; 1922 Don Juan et Faust; 1924 L'Inhumaine / UK: The Inhuman Woman / USA: The New Enchantment, costume designer only) and Jean Renoir (1926 Nana, also actor). In 1923, he directed his first film, a short, under the supervision of Marcel L'Herbier. He was also an assistant director to young René Clair (1925 Paris qui dort / Le Rayon de la Mort / UK: Paris Asleep / The Crazy Ray / USA: At 3:25, shot in 1923). While he began his directing career, he still worked once with Clair (1926 Le Voyage imaginaire). In 1925, he experimented with the Hypergonar, an anamorphic lens invented by Henri Chrétien. The movie (Construire un Feu) and the process were not convincing, and the invention was ignored by the French people (in 1952, Twentieth Century Fox bought the patent, which gave birth to CinemaScope). Thanks to his knowledge of English, Autant-Lara went to Hollywood, where he directed several French versions of early American talking pictures and notably worked with Buster Keaton (Buster se marie, Le Plombier amoureux). He wrote several autobiographical books: 1960 Le Coq et le Rat: Chronique Cinématographique du 20ème Siècle (Editions Flambeau), 1981 Télé-Mafia (Editions Alain Lefevre), 1984 La Rage dans le Cœur (Editions Veyrier), 1985 Hollywood Cake-Walk, and 1987 Les Fourgons du Malheur (Editions Veyrier).

BARJOL, JEAN-MICHEL (May 19, 1938, Marseille, Bouches-du-Rhône, France—)

He was an orphan at a very young age and had a eventful and disturbed childhood. After spending years in boarding schools, he graduated with a bachelor’s degree in natural sciences. At the end of his twenty-seven months of military service, he opted for cinema and began filming his own story, day after day, without script. He founded a theatrical group, Le Théâtre du Temps Présent, and shot a four-hour western with the members of the troupe (Blues pour un Cow Boy qui a mal au Ventre). In 1981, he co-created, with three friends of his, a film production company, B.Q.H.L. Productions. He also cut a few trailers and directed commercials.

BARONNET, JEAN (September 3, 1929, Paris, France—)

Trained as a musician (he received a cello and chamber music first prize), he was assistant to Pierre Schaeffer at the Service de la recherche pour la Musique Concrète (Concrete Music Research Service) from 1956 to 1958. He co-founded with Pierre Henry the first electroacoustic music studio (1958–1962) before entering films as a sound engineer (1966 Les Morutiers, documentary, Jean-Daniel Pollet; Un Homme et une Femme / UK and USA: A Man and a Woman, Claude Lelouch; 1967 Vivre pour vivre / Vivere per vivere / USA: Live for Life, Claude Lelouch, France / Italy; Mise à Sac / Una notte per 5 rapine, Alain Cavalier, France / Italy; 1968 Les Gauloises bleues, Michel Cournot; 1969 Money-Money, José Varéla). Disappointed by the lack of interest of directors for sound and music, he became a great reporter for TV, collaborating on such programs as Point-Contrepoint and Panorama. Other credit (as co-producer): 1963 Begegnung mit Fritz Lang (documentary, short, Peter Fleischmann, West Germany / France). Books: 1987 Communards en Nouvelle-Calédonie (Mercure de France); 2006 Regard d'un parisien sur la Commune (Gallimard).

BENOÎT-LÉVY, JEAN (April 25, 1888, Paris, France—August 2, 1959, Paris, France)

Born into a Jewish Alsatian family, he was the nephew of Edmond Benoît-Lévy, who created the first Parisian movie theater, L'Omnia, in 1906. He made his film debut as assistant director to Pierre Frondaie (Montmartre, 1910) and wrote screenplays under the pseudonym of Francis Mair (1916 Pardon glorieux, Henry Roussel; Les Vainqueurs de la Marne, Gaston Leprieur; 1917 Les Lois du Monde, Fanny Liona; Le Bonheur qui revient, André Hugon). In 1920, he became general secretary of the Paris-based Omnia Films Society and collaborated on Jean Epstein's Pasteur (1922) as cinematographer and artistic director. From 1920, he directed and produced institutional and educational shorts. Later, he shot many ballet films. In 1940, he took refuge in New York, where he taught at the New School for Social Research from 1941 to 1946. Then he worked for the United Nations as director of films and visual information before becoming executive director of the UN film board in 1947. He authored several books, including Les Grandes Missions du Cinéma (Editions Lucien Parizeau, Montreal, 1945).

BERRY, JOHN (Jak Szold / September 6, 1917, New York, New York, USA–November 29, 1999, Paris, France)

The son of a Polish restaurant owner and a Romanian actress, he made his stage debut at age four and directed his first play at age twenty. Spotted by Orson Welles, he joined the Mercury Theater, for which he notably acted and directed an adaptation of Richard Wright’s novel Native Son. When Welles went to Hollywood in 1940 to film Citizen Kane, he was left in charge of the theater company. Four years later, he directed his first feature film. In the early 1950s, his Hollywood career was cut short by the House Un-American Activities Committee. Blacklisted, he left for France, where he began directing Eddie Constantine’s vehicles. He returned to the USA and directed several American movies.

BUÑUEL, LUIS (Luis Buñuel Portoles / February 22, 1900, Calanda, Spain–July 29, 1983, Mexico, D.F. Mexico)

The son of wealthy landowners, he was educated by Jesuit priests. He studied natural science at the University of Madrid, where he befriended Salvador Dalí and Federico García Lorca. In 1920, he created one of the first European film clubs. He went to France in 1925 to enroll in the Académie du Cinéma. The frequenting of surrealists marked him for the rest of his life. He entered films as assistant director (1926 Mauprat, Jean Epstein; 1927 La Sirène des Tropiques / UK and USA: The Siren of the Tropics, Henri Etiévant, Mario Nalpas; 1928 La Chute de la Maison Usher / UK and USA: The Fall of the House of Usher, also co-screenwriter, co-adapter Jean Epstein) and actor (1926 Carmen, Jacques Feyder). Having returned to Spain in the early 1930s, he worked as executive producer (1936 Madrid 36 / España / España leal en armas, documentary, also screenwriter, author of commentary, editorial supervisor, Jean-Paul Le Chanois; ¿Quién mi quiere a mí?, also supervisor, José Luis Sáenz de Heredia, Spain; 1937 ¡Centinela, alerta!, also supervisor, Jean Grémillon, Spain). A Republican during the Civil War, he was sent to the USA by the Republic's government in 1938. He stayed in America after the victory of General Franco and landed a job as archivist and film librarian at the MGM shorts department. In 1946, he went to Mexico, where he met producer Oscar Dancigers, who financed several of his films. He co-wrote Si usted no puede, yo sí (Julián Soler, Mexico, 1951) and occasionally appeared as actor in motion pictures (1964 Llanto por un bandido / Les Bandits / La Charge des Rebelles / Cavaliere della vendetta, Carlos Saura, Spain / France / Italy; 1965 En este pueblo no hay ladrones, Albert Isaac, Mexico) and as himself in the TV documentary Cinéastes de notre Temps: Luis Buñuel (Robert Valey, 1964). His movie Viridiana won the Cannes film Festival Golden Palm in 1962. Most of his movies of the 1960s and 1970s were French productions. He co-authored an autobiography with his favorite collaborator, screenwriter Jean-Claude Carrière: 1982 Mon Dernier Soupir (Editions Robert Laffont). His sons Rafael and Juan Luis are also filmmakers. Other credits (as author of original book): 1971 Una historia decente (short, Gerardo García, Spain); (as uncredited collaborator to screenplay): 1971 Johnny Got His Gun (Dalton Trumbo, USA); (as co-screenwriter, co-adapter): 1972 Le Moine

CAPELLANI, ALBERT (November 23, 1874, Paris, France—1931, Paris, France)

After his studies at the Conservatory, he played onstage, notably working with André Antoine and Firmin Gémier at the Odéon before directing the Théâtre de l'Alhambra. He was hired by Pathé in 1906 and became artistic director of the S.C.A.G.L. (Société Cinématographique des Auteurs et Gens de Lettres) in 1908. He supervised and advised such directors as Georges Denola, Georges Monca, Michel Carré, and Henri Etiévant. He offered to Mistinguett her first important part on-screen in Les Misérables. From 1915 to 1923, he worked in the USA for various societies (Pathé Exchange, Metro Pictures Corporation, World Film, Cosmopolitan, and Nazimova Productions), helped actress Alla Nazimova become one of the greatest Hollywood stars of the silent era, and created his own production company, Capellani Productions, Inc. He returned to France in 1923 and vainly tried to concretize projects. Other credits (as author of original story): 1919 The Parisian Tigress (Herbert Blaché; USA); (as film supervisor, producer): 1920 The Love Cheat (George Archainbaud, USA); A Damsel in Distress (George Archainbaud, USA). His brother was actor Paul Capellani (1884–1944).

CARPITA, PAUL (November 12, 1922, Marseille, Bouches-du-Rhône, France–)

The son of a docker father and a fishmonger mother, he was a schoolteacher from 1946 to 1968. A former resistant during World War II, he co-founded with a few friends CINEPAX, a politically involved group of filmmakers who shot 16-mm reports (Equipe de Choc; Pour que nos Joues soient toujours roses; Nous voulons vivre!). From 1953 to 1955, he directed his first feature film, Le Rendez-vous des Quais, which was censored because it showed a Marseille dockers' strike organized by a Communist labor union to protest the Indochina War and "scenes of resistance to public force susceptible to disturb public order." In 1988, the seized copies were found in the Bois d'Arcy Film Archives, and the movie was first shown at the French Cinemathèque and then was released theatrically in 1990.

CAYROL, JEAN (June 6, 1911, Bordeaux, Gironde, France–February 10, 2005, Bordeaux, France)

At age fifteen, he created a literary review, Abeilles et Pensées, and published poems in the Cahiers du Sud at age eighteen. After completing his studies in law and literature, he worked as a librarian at the Bordeaux Chamber of Commerce in 1935. During World War II, he joined the French Resistance in 1941. Arrested in 1942, he was interned in Fresnes jail and then deported to Mathausen concentration camp. Having returned to France, he wrote poems and novels (he won the Théophraste Renaudot Prize in 1947 for Je vivrai l'Amour des Autres). By 1950, he became literary adviser for the publisher Le Seuil and founded the review Ecrire, in which were published young writers. His first contribution to cinema was the commentary of Nuit et Brouillard / UK and USA: Night and Fog (documentary, Alain Resnais, 1955). He made his directing debut in 1960 and co-signed most his films with novelist, former teacher, and future publisher Claude Durand. He wrote the screenplay and dialogue of Alain Resnais's Muriel ou Le Temps d'un Retour / Muriel, il tempo di un ritorno / UK: Muriel, or The Time of Return / USA: The Time of Return (France / Italy). Two TV movies were adapted from his novels (1975 N'oubliez pas que nous aimons, Luc Godevais; 1978 Kakemono Hôtel, Franck Apprederis). He co-authored with Claude Durand an essay on cinema: 1963 Le Droit de Regard (Editions du Seuil).

CLAIR, RENÉ (René Chomette / November 11, 1898, Paris, France—March 15, 1981, Neuilly-sur-Seine, Hauts-de-Seine, France)

The son of a soap merchant, he grew up in the Les Halles area. In 1917, he took part in World War I as an ambulance driver. He authored two unpublished collection of poems (1917 La Tête de l'Homme; 1918–1919 Terre). Then he became a reporter at L'Intransigeant under the pseudonym of René Desprès and wrote songs for Damia. Thanks to the singer, he entered films as an actor (1921 Le Lys de la Vie, Georgette Sorrhère, Loïe Fuller; L'Orpheline, twelve episodes: "Malheurs de Mémorin," "Orpheline," "Le Complot," "L'Intruse," "Délivrance," "Le Traquenard," "A l'Ombre du Clocher," "La Conquête d'un Héritage," "Soirs de Paris," "Chagrin d'Amour," "Le Revenant," "Vers le Bonheur," Louis Feuillade; Le Sens de la Mort / USA: The Meaning of Death, Jacob Protozanoff; Parisettes, twelve episodes: "Manoela," "Le Secret de Mme Stefan," "L'Affaire de Neuilly," "L'Enquête," "La Piste," "Grand-Père," "Le Faux Révérend," "Family House," "L'Impasse," "Le Triomphe de Cogolin," "La Fortune de Joaquim," "Le Secret de Costabella," Louis Feuillade, 1953 Le Rouge est mis, short, Hubert Knapp, Igor Barrère). In 1922, he published film reviews in Paris-Journal and Théâtre et Comoedia illustrés. Jacques de Baroncelli, for whom he worked as assistant director (1923 Le Carillon de Minuit / De Beiaard van Middernacht / USA:

The Midnight Chimes, France / Belgium), encouraged him to try his luck as a filmmaker. His name was linked to avant-garde cinema for a while before he won international fame with his poetical and sometimes fantastic comedies shot in France, England, and the USA. He appeared as himself in documentaries (1969 Cinéastes de notre Temps, episode “René Clair,” Jacques Baratier; 1974 Le Cinéma français par ceux qui l’ont fait, Armand Panigel) and authored several novels (1926 Adams; 1951 La Princesse de Chine suivi de De Fil en Aiguille, Gallimard; 1959 Comédies et Commentaires, Gallimard; 1971 L’Etrange Ouvrage des Cieux, Gallimard); 1976 Jeux du Hasard, Gallimard. In 1960, he was elected at the Académie Française. During the 1960s and the 1970s, he dedicated himself to theater and opera as an author and director. Other credits (as author of original idea, co-screenwriter, co-adapter): 1930 Prix de Beauté / UK: Miss Europe (Augusto Genina); (author of French commentary): 1957 The Golden Age of Comedy (compilation documentary, Robert Youngston, USA); (as author of original short story): 1960 De Fil en Aiguille (Lazare Iglésis); (as voice only): 1963 En Compagnie de Max Linder (documentary, Max Linder). CLÉMENT, RENÉ (March 18, 1913, Bordeaux, Gironde, France–March 17, 1996, Monte Carlo)

After completing his secondary studies, he entered the Beaux-Arts, where he attended architecture courses. He directed his first short, a cartoon, at age twenty. Obligated to work after the death of his father, he gave up his studies. In 1934, he met the young Jacques Tati, with whom he made a comedy short two years later. Then he discovered Tunisia with Jean Lehérissey and shot a documentary, Au Seuil de l'Islam. In 1938, he went with the anthropologist Jules Barthou to Yemen, where he filmed three shorts with a hidden camera (they would be released as a single movie, L'Arabie interdite). After being demobilized in 1940, he moved to the "Zone Sud" (South Zone, the former unoccupied part of France) and directed two shorts with cinematographer Henri Alekan. In 1945, he shot his first feature film, La Bataille du Rail / USA: The Battle of the Rails, an evocation of the French railroad men's resistance to the Nazi occupying forces filmed as a documentary, which won the 1946 Cannes Film Festival International Jury Prize. He received the 1954 Cannes Film Festival Grand Prize for Monsieur Ripois. He had been an occasional assistant director (1934 On demande une Brute, short, Charles Barrois; 1945 La Boîte aux Rêves, Yves Allégret, Jean Choux, shot in 1943). Other credit (as technical adviser): 1946 La Belle et la Bête / UK and USA: Beauty and the Beast (Jean Cocteau).

COHL, EMILE (Emile Courtet / January 4, 1857, Paris, France—January 20, 1938, Villejuif, Val-de-Marne, France)

A former apprentice jeweler and illusionist, he became a caricaturist and led a bohemian lifestyle in Montmartre. Thanks to his master and friend André Gill, he published his drawings in such political newspapers as Le Charivari, La Lune, L'Eclipse, and Hommes d'aujourd'hui. Then he was briefly a photographer (1884) before resuming his drawing career, creating riddles, games, and rebus. He frequented many writers and artists of his time, including Victor Hugo, Georges Courteline, Paul Verlaine, Alphonse Allais, Alphonse Daudet, and Caran d'Ache. He belonged to two artistic movements, les Hydropathes and the Incoherents, and was a regular of the famous cabarets Le Lapin Agile and Le Chat Noir. In 1905, after discovering that one of his drawings had been plagiarized by Gaumont as a film poster, he complained to the manager of the company, director Louis Feuillade, who offered him to bring ideas in compensation. He became a pioneer of animation cinema (French Emile Reynaud and American Sidney Blackton were his predecessors and models), making his debut with Fantasmagorie in 1908 and then creating the first recurrent animated character (Fantoché), the first puppet movies (1910 Le Tout petit Faust), the first color cartoon (1910 Le Peintre néo-impressionniste), and the first animated commercials for Campbell Soups (1912). He successively worked for Lux, Gaumont, Pathé (1911), Eclipse, and Éclair (from 1912 to 1914, he ran the animation department at Fort Lee Studios, near New York City, USA). In the USA, he notably met comic strip author George McManus and shot a dozen films with the characters Maggie and Jiggs. Having returned to France, he worked until 1923, but his career progressively declined after World War I (Hollywood had dethroned France in the kingdom of cinema). He had shot more than 300 shorts. Most of them are lost. He died forgotten and ruined at the Hôpital de Villejuif. Other credit (as SFX author): 1908 Le Ski (short, Etienne Arnaud).

COSTA-GAVRAS (Konstantinos Gavras / February 12, 1933, Loutra-Iraias, Greece—)

The son of a bureaucrat of the Greek government who joined the Resistance during World War II, he encountered many difficulties after his father was suspected of being a Communist and put into jail. The doors of Greek universities were closed to him, and he was refused a visa to study in the USA. In 1951, he settled in France, where he studied literature and law for two years before entering the IDHEC. In 1958, he was hired as a trainee assistant director (L'Ambitieuse / UK:

The Dispossessed / USA: The Ambitious One / US TV: The Climbers, Yves Allégret, France / Italy / Australia) before serving as second assistant director (1960 Robinson et le Triporteur / Holà, Robinson! / USA: Monsieur Robinson Crusoe, Jack Pinoteau, France / Spain; Crésus, Jean Giono; 1961 Tout l'Or du Monde / Tutto l'oro del mondo / UK and USA: All the Gold in the World, René Clair, France / Italy) and then first assistant director (1962 Un Singe en Hiver / UK: It's Hot in Hell / USA: A Monkey in Winter, Henri Verneuil; 1963 La Baie des Anges / UK: Bay of Angels / USA: Bay of the Angels, Jacques Demy; Le Jour et l'Heure / Il giorno e l'ora / UK: Today We Live / USA: The Day and the Hour, René Clément, France / Italy; Peau de Banane / Buccia di banana / USA: Banana Peel, Marcel Ophüls, France / Italy; 1964 Les Félines / UK: The Love Cage / USA: Joy House, René Clément; Echappement libre / Scappamento aperto / A escape libre / Der Boss hat sich was ausgedacht / USA: Backfire, Jean Becker, France / Italy / Spain / West Germany). Thanks to the help of Simone Signoret and Yves Montand, he made his directing debut filming an adaptation of a Sébastien Japrisot novel. He occasionally co-wrote movies (1976 Monsieur Klein / Chi è Mr. Klein? / UK and USA: Mr. Klein, uncredited, Joseph Losey, France / Italy; 2006 Mon Colonel, also producer, Laurent Herbiet, France / Belgium), played in a few films (1977 La Vie devant soi / UK: A Life Ahead / USA: Madame Rosa, Moshé Mizrahi; 1985 Spies Like Us, John Landis, USA; 1996 The Stupids, John Landis, USA), and appeared as himself in various documentaries (1974 Le Cinéma français par ceux qui l'ont fait, Armand Panigel; Les Deux Mémoires, Jorge Semprun; 1976 Costa-Gavras—Talks with Marcel Carné, TV short, John Musilli; 1979 Cineastas en México: Entrevista a Costa Gavras, Miguel Necochea, Mexico; 2002 Romy Schneider, Etrange Etrangère, TV, Anne Andreu). He co-founded with his wife Michèle Ray-Gavras a production company, KG Productions, which co-financed most of his films and such movies as Le Thé au Harem d'Archimède / USA: Tea in the Harem (Mehdi Charef, 1985), Miss Mona (Mehdi Charef), and Pleure pas, My Love (Tony Gatlif, 1989).

COUSTEAU, JACQUES-YVES (June 11, 1910, St.-André-de-Cubzac, Gironde, France–June 25, 1997, Paris, France)

The son of an international lawyer, he entered the naval school of Brest in 1930 and became a gunner officer. He became interested in the exploration of the underwater world in 1936, taking part in the invention of the Aqua-Lung, a portable breathing apparatus and perfecting a waterproof 35-mm camera for underwater diving in 1939. After the scuttling of the French navy in Toulon in November 1942, he returned to civilian life and shot his first documentary on the seabed. Then he conceived a new camera and a diving suit. After World War II, he founded the Group of Underwater Researches and the Club of Underwater Alpinism in 1945. In 1950, he leased a ship, La Calypso, from brewer Thomas Loel Guinness for a symbolic franc. The movie he co-directed with Louis Malle (Le Monde du Silence / Il mondo del silenzio / UK and USA: The Silent World, France / Italy) won the 1956 Cannes Film Festival Golden Palm and the Hollywood's Academy Award for best documentary. Le Monde sans Soleil / Il mondo senza sole / USA: Jacques-Yves Cousteau's World Without Sun / World Without Sun earned him the Academy Award for best documentary in 1965. By 1966, the movies he directed were mainly gathered as episodes of TV series (1966–1968 The World of Jacques-Yves Cousteau; 1968–1976 The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau; 1977 Oasis in Space; 1977–1981 Cousteau's Odyssey's Series; 1982–1984 Cousteau's Amazon Series; 1985–1991 Cousteau's Rediscovery of the World I; 1992–1994 Cousteau's Rediscovery of the World II). He appeared in and narrated most of them. From 1946 (Par Dix-Huit Mètres de Fond, co-authored with Philippe Tailliez, Editions Durel) to 1998 (L'Aventure de l'Equipe Cousteau en Bandes Dessinées, in collaboration with Dominique Serafini, seventeen volumes from 1985 to 1998), he wrote or co-wrote several books, including Le Monde du Silence (in collaboration with James Dugan and Frédéric "Didi" Dumas, Editions de Paris, 1952) and L'Homme, la Pieuvre et l'Orchidée (Editions Robert Laffont, 1998). He was elected at the Académie Française in 1988.

COUTARD, RAOUL (September 16, 1924, Paris, France—)

A reporter and photographer, he learned his craft in the French army's Cinematographic Service. From 1945 to 1956, he was a member of the French expeditionary forces as a correspondent and photographer and published his reports in such magazines as Life, Paris-Match, and Radar. He befriended Pierre Schoendoerffer, who offered him work as a cinematographer on his first movies (1957 Than le Pêcheur, short; 1958 La Passe du Diable / I figli di Gengis-Khan / El desfiladero del diablo, France / Italy / Spain, shot in 1956; 1959 Ramuntcho; Pêcheur d'Islande). His filmography as a cinematographer includes almost eighty movies, notably directed by Jean-Luc Godard (1960 A Bout de Souffle / UK: By a Tether / UK and USA: Breathless; 1961 Une Femme est une Femme / La donna è donna / USA: A Woman Is a Woman; 1962 Vivre sa Vie: Film en Douze Tableaux / Vivre sa Vie / UK: It's My Life / USA: My Life to Live; 1963 Le Petit Soldat / UK and USA: The Little Soldier; Les Carabiniers / UK: The Soldiers, France / Italy; Le Mépris / Il disprezzo / USA: Contempt, France / Italy; 1964 Bande à Part / UK: The Outsiders / USA: Band of Outsiders; Les plus belles Escroqueries du Monde / Le più belle truffe del mondo / De Wereld wil bedrogen worden / UK and USA: The Beautiful Swindlers / The World's Most Beautiful Swindlers / World's Greatest Swindlers, episode "Le Grand Escroc," France / Italy / Netherlands / Japan; Une Femme mariée: Suite de Fragments tournés en 1964 / Une Femme mariée / UK and USA: A Married Woman; 1965 Alphaville, une étrange Aventure de Lemmy Caution / Agente Lemmy Caution, missione Alphaville / UK: Alphaville, a Strange Adventure of Lemmy Caution / Alphaville, a Strange Case of Lemmy Caution / USA: Dick Tracy on Mars, France / Italy; Pierrot le Fou / Il bandito delle ore undici / Il bandito delle undici / UK: Crazy Pete / Pierrot Goes Wild / UK and USA: Pierrot le Fou, France / Italy; 1966 Made in U.S.A.; 1967 Deux ou Trois Choses que je sais d'elle / UK and USA: Two or Three Things I Know About Her; La Chinoise; Week-End / Week-End, un uomo e una donna dal sabato alla domenica / USA: Weekend, France / Italy; 1982 Passion / USA: Godard's Passion, France / Switzerland; 1983 Prénom Carmen

COUZINET, EMILE (November 12, 1896, Bourgsur-Gironde, Gironde, France—October 24, 1964, Bordeaux, Gironde, France)

He made his fortune as a casino manager in Royan. In 1920, he founded a film release company, Burgus Films, and opened his first movie theater, the Gallia, in Agen. He designed the plans of the Rex, a baroque pictures temple in Bordeaux that was classified as a historical monument. In 1938, he became a producer, created his own studios (La Côte d'Argent [The Silver Coast]) in Royan, and directed his first feature film. He shot some of the silliest comedies ever filmed and is regarded by some critics as a kind of (wealthy!) French cousin of Ed Wood. He produced two movies (1956 L'Inspecteur connaît la Musique, Jean Josipovici; 1965 Le Coup de Grâce, Jean Cayrol, Claude Durand).

Filmography

COWL, DARRY (André Darricau / August 27, 1925, Vittel, Vosges, France—February 14, 2006, Neuilly-sur-Seine, France)

After studying music at the Paris Conservatory, he became a barroom piano player before making his acting debut in Parisian cabarets. He wasted his real talent starring or co-starring in cheap comedies of the 1950s, 1960s, 1970s, and 1980s (more than 120 movies from 1955 Bonjour Sourire, Claude Sautet, to 2005 La Vie privée, Zina Modiano) with some notable exceptions (1957 Les Trois font la Paire, Sacha Guitry, Clément Duhour; Assassins et Voleurs / UK: Murderers and Thieves / USA: Lovers and Thieves, Sacha Guitry; 1965 Les Tribulations d'un Chinois en Chine / L'uomo di Hong Kong / UK and USA: Up to His Ears / USA: Chinese Adventures in China, Philippe de Broca, France / Italy; 1974 Touche pas à la Femme blanche / Non toccare la donna bianca / US video: Don't Touch the White Woman, Marco Ferreri, France / Italy; 1999 Augustin, Roi du Kung-Fu / USA: Augustin, King of Kung-Fu, Anne Fontaine; 2003 Pas sur la Bouche / USA: Not on the Lips, Alain Resnais, France / Italy). He wrote the dialogue of a Jean Delannoy segment ("La Répétition") of Le Lit à Deux Places / Racconti a due piazze / USA: The Double Bed (France / Italy). Other credits (as composer): 1967 Ces Messieurs de la Famille (Raoul André); 1969 Le Bourgeois Gentil Mec (Raoul André); 1970 Ces Messieurs de la Gâchette (Raoul André); 1973 Le Concierge (Jean Girault); 1976 Le Jour de Gloire / Ein Priester, ein Panzer und ein Haufen müder landser (Jacques Besnard, France / West Germany); 1977 Arrête ton Char . . . Bidasse! / Oh, la-la—Die kleinen Blondes sind da (Michel Gérard, France / West Germany); 1978 Général . . . nous voilà! (Jacques Besnard). He authored two autobiographies: 1996 Débit de Paroles (L'Archipel); 2005 Mémoires d'un Canailou (Editions Numéro 1).

CRESTÉ, RENÉ (December 5, 1881, Paris, France–November 30, 1922, Paris, France)

A stage performer since 1901, he made his film debut in 1910 (La Chatte métamorphosée en Femme, short, Michel Carré) and played in about thirty films until his death. His name is linked to Louis Feuillade, and he remains best remembered for his portrayal of Judex (1916 Judex, twelve episodes; 1917 La Nouvelle Mission de Judex / USA: The New Mission of Judex, twelve episodes). In 1918, he created his own production company, Les Films René Cresté. Unfortunately, the movies he produced, directed, and performed were commercial failures, and he tried to earn a living running a movie theater (Le Cocorico) and playing the role of Judex in a show at the Gaîté-Rochechouart. He was ruined when he died of tuberculosis at age forty.

DELLUC, LOUIS (October 14, 1890, Cadouin, Dordogne, France–March 22, 1924, Paris, France)

He settled in Paris at age fifteen to complete his secondary studies but dropped out of high school to become a journalist in 1909. In 1910, he published his first dramatic review in Comoedia illustré. He wrote poems and plays. Thanks to actress Eve Francis (1886–1980), he watched Cecil B. DeMille's The Cheat and fell in love with cinema. In 1917, Henri Diamant-Berger published his first film review in Film and hired him as chief editor. In January 1919, he married Eve

Francis, who starred in the movies he directed and the one he wrote (1920 La Fête espagnole, Germaine Dulac). He never stopped writing in film magazines (1918 Paris Midi; 1923–1924 Bonsoir). In 1920, he co-founded Le Journal du Ciné-Club and then, in 1921, Cinéa. He was a pioneer of cine-clubs. His novel Le Train sans Yeux was brought to the screen by Alberto Cavalcanti in 1926, two years after his death from tuberculosis. Other credit (as actor): 1921 Prométhée . . . Banquier (Marcel L'Herbier). Books: 1919 Cinéma et Cie (Grasset); 1920 Photogénie (De Brunhoff); 1921 Charlot (De Brunhoff; English edition: 1922 Charlie Chaplin, John Lane, London; American edition: 1922 Charlie Chaplin, The Bodley Head Ltd., New York).

DEMY, JACQUES (June 5, 1931, Pontchâteau, Loire-Atlantique, France—October 27, 1990, Paris, France)

A movie buff since his childhood, he bought a camera and shot a first amateur short with his brother and some of his friends (L'Aventure de Solange). Unfortunately, the film was overexposed. Then he tried another experience and filmed a stop-motion animated film with puppets (Attaque nocturne) at age seventeen. During his studies at the Launay technical college, he enrolled in evening classes at the Beaux-Arts. In 1948, he met director Christian-Jaque, who saw Attaque nocturne and encouraged him to try his luck in Paris. Having settled in Paris in 1949, he attended courses at the Ecole Technique de Photographie et de Cinématographie (Vaugirard), where he directed a short, Les Horizons morts. Then he collaborated on the shooting of Paul Grimault's animated commercials before serving as an assistant to director Georges Rouquier (1954 Arthur Honegger, documentary, short; 1955 Lourdes et ses Miracles, documentary, short; 1957 S.O.S. Noronha). His first professional movies were shorts. He played small parts in films (1959 Les Quatre Cents Coups / UK and USA: The Four Hundred Blows, uncredited, François Truffaut; 1960 Paris nous appartient / UK: Paris Is Ours / USA: Paris Belongs to Us, Jacques Rivette; 1991 Jacquot de Nantes, Jacques Demy; 1993 Les Demoiselles ont 25 Ans, documentary, Agnès Varda) and appeared as himself in documentaries (1964 Cinéastes de notre Temps, episode "La Nouvelle Vague par elle-même," André S. Labarthe, Robert Valey; 1974 Histoire du Cinéma français par ceux qui l'ont fait, Armand Panigel). He died of a cerebral hemorrhage. He was married to director Agnès Varda (b. 1928). He was the father of production designer Rosalie Varda and actor Mathieu Demy (b. 1972).

DESAGNAT, JEAN-PIERRE (October 18, 1934, Paris, France—)

A movie buff since childhood, he wrote and shot 8.5-mm films with his high school friends. After completing his secondary studies, he obtained a certificate of proficiency in English. During his summer holidays in Chamonix in 1949 and 1955, he joined as a carrier the crews of two American movies (1950 The White Tower, Ted Tetzlaff; 1956 The Mountain, John Sturges). Thanks to his father, a former journalist before World War II, who introduced him to Pierre Foucaud, André Hunebelle's screenwriter, he made his film debut as a trainee assistant director (1956 Mannequins de Paris, André Hunebelle). From 1957 to 1959, he spent thirty-one months in Algeria in the army's Cinematographic Service and shot documentaries before becoming a reporter and cameraman. Back to civilian life, he directed his only short and then resumed his collaboration with André Hunebelle as second assistant director (1960 Le Capitain / El capitano del re / USA: Captain Blood / US TV: The Invincible Man, André Hunebelle, France / Italy; 1961 Le Miracle des Loups / La congiura dei potenti / USA: Blood on His Sword / The Miracle of the Wolves, André Hunebelle, France / Italy) and then first assistant director (1964 Fantômas / Fantomas 70, André Hunebelle, France / Italy; 1965 Furia à Bahia pour OSS 117 / OSS 117 furia a Bahia / UK: Mission for a Killer / USA: OSS 117: Mission for a Killer, André Hunebelle, France / Italy; Fantômas se déchaîne / Fantomas minaccia il mondo / UK and USA: Fantomas strikes Back / The Vengeance of Fantomas, André Hunebelle, France / Italy; 1966 Atout Coeur à Tokyo pour OSS 117 / OSS 117 a Tokio si muore / UK:

DHÉRY, ROBERT (Robert Fourrey / April 27, 1921, Héry, Yonne, France—December 3, 2004, Saint-Denis, Seine-Saint-Denis, France)

The grandson and son of millers, he intended to become a clown and joined an itinerant circus at age fourteen. Then he briefly attended René Simon's courses before enrolling in the Paris Conservatory, where he had Louis Jouvet and Béatrix Dussane as teachers. He also met a young actress named Colette Brosset (1922–2007) and married her in 1943. He formed a trio with Christian Duvaléix and Jacques Emmanuel called Les Sockett and made his professional debut in a cabaret music hall. In 1948, he wrote and created Les Branquignols, which he brought to the screen the following year. Les Branquignols was also the name of his stage company and included such actors as Michel Serrault, Louis de Funès, Jean Poiret, Francis Blanche, Jacques Legras, Christian Duvaléix, Pierre Olaf, Pierre Tornade, Micheline Dax, Robert Rollis, Maurice Baquet, and Jean Carmet, with whom he wrote and performed successful comical shows (Dugudu; Vos Gueules les Mouettes!; La Grosse Valse; Jupon vole; En Sourdine ... les Sardines; Le Chapeau de mon Oncle; Pommes à l'Anglaise). Thanks to La Plume de ma Tante, he won huge popularity with British and American audiences (the tour lasted three years) and won a Tony Award in 1959. Besides the movies he directed, he played in about twenty films (from 1940 Remorques / USA: Stormy Waters, Jean Grémillon, to 1987 La Passion Béatrice / Quarto comandamento / USA: Beatrice / US video: The Passion of Beatrice, Bertrand Tavernier, France / Italy). He wrote the screenplay of Ah! Les Belles Bacchantes / UK: Femmes de Paris / USA: Peek-a-Boo (Jean Loubignac, 1954). Autobiography: 1978 Ma Vie de Branquignol (Calmann-Lévy).

DULAC, GERMAINE (Germaine Charlotte Saisset-Schneider / November 17, 1882, Amiens, Somme, France–July 20, 1942, Paris, France)

Born into a family of industrialists, she was raised by her grandmother in Paris. After studying various arts, including opera, dance, and music, she married writer and journalist Marie-Louis-Albert Dulac in 1905. A militant suffragette, she collaborated on Marguerite Durant's feminist newspaper La Fronde and to La Française (1906–1913), the organ of the French suffragette movement in which she published theater criticism. Her meeting with actress Stacia Napierkowska led her to cinema in 1914. The following year, she created a production company run by her husband that successively was named Krishna, Delia, and then D.H. Film. She co-produced La Lumière du Coeur (Edmond Van Daële, 1916) and supervised the shootings of Mon Paris (Albert Guyot, 1927) and Le Picador (Lucien Jaquelux, 1932). Her name remained linked to avant-garde cinema. She was a film theorist and the permanent secretary of the French cine-club movement.

DURAS, MARGUERITE (Marguerite Donnadiou / April 4, 1914, Gia Dinh, French Cochinchina [now Vietnam]–March 3, 1996, Paris, France)

Born to French parents, both schoolteachers, she spent her childhood and adolescence in French Cochinchina and Cambodia (with two years in France). She left Indochina to study law, mathematics, and political science at the Sorbonne in Paris. From 1938 to 1940, she earned her living as a secretary in France's Ministry of Colonies. During the occupation of France, she joined the French Resistance while her husband was a prisoner in Dachau (he came back alive in 1945). Her first novel, Les Impudents, was published by Plon in 1943. Thirty-three books would follow until 1995 (C'est tout, Editions P.O.L.). She used the pseudonym of Duras from the name of the village where her father had his house (he died when she was four years old). Many of her novels and plays were brought to the big and small screens (1958 The Angry Age / La diga sul Pacifico / The Sea Wall,

René Clément, Italy / USA; 1961 ITV Television Playhouse, episode "The Square," Stuart Burge, UK; 1965 Love Story, episode "La Musica," John Nelson-Burton, UK; 1966 *10.30 P.M. ENRICO, ROBERT (Gino Robert Enrico / April 13, 1931, Liévin, Nord-Pas-de-Calais, France–February 23, 2001, Paris, France)

The son of modest Italian immigrant tradesmen, he grew up in Toulon, where his father, a former champion motorcyclist, owned a store selling two-wheeled vehicles. After being educated by Marist fathers, he turned down the proposition to manage the family shop and got into the IDHEC (Institut des Hautes Etudes Cinématographiques), where he spent two years studying production (1949–1951). Then he joined a medieval group at the Sorbonne University, Les Théophiliens. Taking part in his new friends' theatrical work (they performed French medieval stage repertoires), he also filmed them for television (Le Brésil des Théophiliens). He collaborated as an assistant director and editor on several shorts and accepted some commissioned works filming medical and industrial documentaries. In 1956, he co-directed and edited with Luciano Emmer A Chacun son Paradis, a documentary made up of 16-mm movies shot by explorers / filmmakers (the original films were shown to audiences during lectures organized by Connaissance du Monde). The same year, he directed his first personal movie, Jehanne, a short documentary on Joan of Arc composed from fifteenth-century miniatures that was selected for Venice Film Festival. From 1956 to 1959, he was doing military service at the Service Cinématographique des Armées (cinematographical department of the army), where he mixed with future filmmakers Claude Lelouch and Jean-Gabriel Albicocco and directed five didactic films for the French armed forces. In 1960, his original approach to the biological cycle of the pine processionary caterpillar in his short Thaumetopoea earned him several awards, including the Bronze Medal of 1960 Venice Film Festival and the Golden Bear of 1961 Berlin Film Festival. His short La Rivière du Hibou, from Ambrose Bierce, who won a Palme d'Or at the 1962 Cannes Film Festival and a Hollywood Academy Award, was included as an episode of the US TV series The Twilight Zone. For his first feature film, La Belle Vie, he received in 1964 the Jean Vigo Prize. He was president of the César (French Oscar) Academy, which awarded his film Le Vieux Fusil the best French movie of 1976–1986. He edited a short (1962 Allegro ma non troppo, Paul de Roubaix) and appeared in Le Chemin d'Azatoth (short, Clément Delage). His autobiography (2005 Au Coeur de ma Vie, Editions Christian Pirot) was published four years after his death.

EPSTEIN, JEAN (March 26, 1897, Warsaw, Poland–April 1, 1953, Paris, France)

The son of a French-Jewish father and a Polish mother, he left Warsaw in 1903 with his mother and sister after his father died. He was a schoolboy in Lausanne, Switzerland, until the start of new school year of 1909, when he went to a private school, la Villa Saint-Jean. After attending “math-élem.” classes until 1915, he chose to go to Lyon (where his father had lived). In 1916, he opted first to study for entrance to the Ecole Centrale before branching off into natural sciences and medicine. A nonresident student at Lyon General Hospital, he met Auguste Lumière and became his secretary. Passionately interested in literature and poetry, he founded in December 1920 a review, Promenoir, and obtained texts from writer Blaise Cendrars, filmmaker Auguste Lumière, and painter Fernand Léger. Blaise Cendrars (who worked at the time as an assistant director to Abel Gance) introduced him to publisher Paul Laffitte, the former founder of the Film d'Art in 1908 and the creator and owner of the Editions de la Sirène. In 1920, Laffitte published his first book, La Poésie d'aujourd'hui, un nouvel état de l'Intelligence (with a preface by Blaise Cendrars), who was praised by film theoreticians Louis Moussinac and Louis Delluc. In 1921, Laffitte hired him as a secretary, and Delluc asked him to write articles in his review Cinéa and to be his assistant on the movie Le Tonnerre. The same year, he published another essay, Bonjour Cinéma, which strengthened his reputation of being “the first film theoretician in the world,” according to the words of film historian (and theoretician) Jean Mitry. He directed his first film in 1922. Thanks to his books and his most interesting films, his name remains linked to the avant-garde. Other books: 1922 La Lyrisophie (poetry; Editions La Sirène); 1926 Le Cinématographe vu de l'Etna (essay; Les Ecrivains réunis); 1932 L'Or des Mers (novel; Editions Valois); 1935 Les Recteurs et la Sirène (novel; Editions Montaigne); Photogénie de l'Impondérable (essay; Editions Corymbe); 1947 L'Intelligence d'une Machine (essay; Editions Jacques Melot); 1948 Le Cinéma du Diable (essay; Jacques Melot); 1955 Esprit de Cinéma (Editions Jeheber).

EPSTEIN, MARIE (Marie-Antonine Epstein / August 14, 1899, Warsaw, Poland–April 24, 1995, Paris, France)

The daughter of a French-Jewish father and a Polish mother, she was film director Jean Epstein's sister. In France since 1903, she worked mainly as screenwriter and co-director with her brother and Jean Benoît-Lévy (she was his assistant for Le Feu de Paille / USA: Fire in the Straw, 1940, and most of the shorts he directed). During the occupation of France, she was arrested by the Nazis with Jean Epstein and escaped the concentration camps thanks to the Red Cross. Until the end of the 1980s, she worked at the Cinémathèque française (she co-founded it in the 1930s), where she restored many silent films. She also dedicated much of her time to the knowledge of her brother's works and gathered all his theoretical writings into two volumes titled Ecrits sur le Cinéma (Editions Seghers, 1975) and, as producer, Maternité (Jean Benoît-Lévy, 1929). Other credits (as screenwriter): 1923 Cœur fidèle (also co-screenwriter, actor as Mlle. Merice, Jean Epstein); 1925 Le Double Amour (Jean Epstein); 1927 Six et demi, Onze (Jean Epstein); 1958 Liberté surveillée (also co-screenwriter; Henri Aisner, Vladimir Voltchek, France / Czechoslovakia, shot in 1957).

ERTAUD, JACQUES (November 18, 1924, Paris, France–November 18, 1995, Paris, France)

The son of a seagoing captain, he just had time to complete his studies in high school before joining the FFI (Forces Françaises de l'intérieur, one of the branches of the French Resistance during the occupation of France) as a skier scout. After the war, he made his film debut as assistant director on mountain movies shot by Marcel Ichac (1945–1948). A true adventurer, he spent ten days at 800 meters under the surface of the earth in a chasm filming Le Gouffre de la Pierre Saint-Martin, a speleological documentary that won the 1952 Grand Prix du Documentaire Français. From 1948 to 1956, he took part as a filmmaker in seven expeditions led by Commandant Jacques-Yves Cousteau. In 1956, he was a war correspondent during the Suez Expedition. The same year, Robert Bresson hired him to play a part in Un Condamné à Mort s'est échappé / USA: A Man Escaped. In 1960, he became a reporter for Cinq Colonnes à la Une, the most famous French TV world current affairs program, which led him to co-produce Sept Jours du Monde, a weekly TV program covering the major international events of the past seven days. In 1967, he directed his first fictional work, L'Homme du Picardie, one of the most successful French TV series. He co-wrote an episode from the L'Heure Simenon TV series (“Le Temps d’Anais”) and a TV movie (1999 Premier de Cordée, Pierre-Antoine Hiroz, Edouard Niermans).

FEUILLADE, LOUIS (February 20, 1873, Lunel, Hérault, France–February 26, 1925, Nice, Alpes-Maritimes, France)

The son of a wine broker, he was educated at the Catholic seminary of Carcassonne. After completing his military service in the Fourth Dragoons cavalry regiment of Chambéry, he got married in 1895. He earned his living working as an accountant in the family firm until 1898. Then he successively was a sales representative for a wine grower, secretary for a politician, chief editor of a short-lived satirical weekly newspaper La Tomate, and secretary of redaction of La Revue mondiale (October 1904). During the fall of 1905, he proposed screenplays to the Gaumont's artistic director, Alice Guy. He became the chief screenwriter (more than 100 scripts) of the prestigious company and made his directing debut in 1906. The following year, he succeeded Alice Guy as chief of the theater and filming department. He died of peritonitis.

GOSCINNY, RENÉ (August 4, 1926, Paris, France—November 5, 1977, Paris, France)

Born to a family of Jewish Polish-Ukrainian parents, he moved to Buenos Aires, Argentina, with his family in 1928. After the death of his father in 1943, he had to find a job, and he earned his living as an assistant accountant in a tire recovery factory. He made his debut as an illustrator in an advertising agency. In 1945, he went to New York. After several difficult years, he became a drawer for a studio and befriended the future great names of Mad magazine (Jack Davis, Will Elder, and Harvey Kurtzman) and two young Belgians, Joseph Gillain and Maurice de Bevere, who were known as two masters of European comics under the pseudonyms of Gigé and Morris. Having returned to Paris in 1951, he was chief of the local office of the World Press Agency for several years and soon thereafter began a fruitful collaboration as a screenwriter with one of his employees, Albert Uderzo, a drawer of Italian descent who had started his career after World War II, creating such comic strips as “Flamberge,” “Clopinaud,” “Bell-boy,” and “Arys Buck.” He co-created with his new friend several comic strips: “Bill Blanchart,” “Jehan Pistolet,” “Benjamin et Benjamin,” “Oumpah-pah,” and the internationally famous “Astérix and Obélix,” who lived their first adventures in the cult comics magazine Pilote in 1959. From 1961 (Astérix le Gaulois, Editions Dargaud) to 1979 (Astérix chez les Belges, Editions Dargaud), twenty-four albums would follow (Uderzo carried on the publication of “Astérix and Obélix” as screenwriter, drawer, and publisher until today). In 1959, he wrote the first volume of Le Petit Nicolas, including nineteen stories illustrated by Jean-Jacques Sempé. Reedited with a constant success for fifty years, Le Petit Nicolas (Editions Denoël, 1960), Les Récrés du petit Nicolas (seventeen stories, Editions Denoël, 1961), Les Vacances du petit Nicolas (eighteen stories, Editions Denoël, 1962), Le Petit Nicolas et ses Copains (Editions Denoël, 1963), and Joachim a des Ennuis / reedited under the title Le Petit Nicolas a des Ennuis (Editions Denoël, 1964) are regarded as classics by French readers and literary critics. Parallel to his activities as editor in chief of Pilote (1960–1977), he invented new characters and series (Iznogoud with Tabary as drawer, 1961; Les Dingodossiers, 1967–1972). He also co-wrote screenplays for films (1964 Tous les Enfants du Monde, also co-author of original characters, André Michel; Tintin et les Oranges bleues / El misterio de las naranjas azules / Tintin y el misterio de las naranjas azules, Philippe Condroyer, France / Spain;

GUITRY, SACHA (Alexandre-Georges Guitry / February 21, 1885, St. Petersburg, Russia—July 24, 1957, Paris, France)

The son of the great actor Lucien Guitry (1860–1925), he had a mediocre schooling. In 1899, he made his stage debut under the pseudonym of Lorcey in Victor Hugo's Hernani. At age sixteen, he wrote the first of his 120 plays, La Page, which was created in 1902. In 1905, his play Nono (written in four days) was a huge success, helping him become one of the most famous French boulevard authors of his century. In 1915, he filmed a documentary (Ceux de chez nous / USA: Those of Our Land) in which appeared his father's friends: actress Sarah Bernhardt; writers Anatole France and Octave Mirbeau; stage director André Antoine; painters Edgar Degas, Claude Monet, and Auguste Renoir; playwright Edmond Rostand; future director Jean Renoir; and composer Camille Saint-Saëns. He played in a couple of silent movies (1918 Un Roman d'Amour et d'Aventures, also screenwriter, René Hervil, Louis Mercanton; 1923 La Voyante, also author of original play, Léon Abrams, Louis Mercanton) but was not interested in cinema before the beginning of the talkies era. He collaborated as a screenwriter on several films (1931 Le Blanc et le Noir, as author of original play, screenwriter, dialogist, Léonce Perret; 1938 L'Accroche-Cœur / Riviera Express, as screenwriter, dialogist, technical adviser, Pierre Caron; 1951 Adhémar ou Le Jouet de la Fatalité, as screenwriter, dialogist, Fernandel, Sacha Guitry fell ill and chose Fernandel to direct the movie; 1958 La Vie à Deux / UK: Life Together / USA: Life as a Couple, as screenwriter, dialogist, Clément Duhour; 1960 Au Voleur! / Affaire Nabab, as screenwriter, Ralph Habib, France / West Germany). Many of his plays were brought to the screen (1924 The Lover of Camille, from Deburau, Harry Beaumont, USA; 1930 Sleeping Partners, from Faisons un Rêve, Seymour Hicks, USA; 1940 Lucky Partners, from Bonne Chance, Lewis Milestone, USA; 1996 Beaumarchais l'Insolent / USA: Beaumarchais the Scoundrel, Edouard Molinaro; Désiré, Bernard Murat; 1997 Quadrille, Valérie Lemercier; Le Comédien, Christian de Chalonge; 2001 Un Crime au Paradis, from La Poison, Jean Becker) and adapted for TV (1970 Zwei ganze Tage / Zwei ganze Tage—Wir wollen uns ein Lufts Schloss bauen / Faisons un Rêve, Marcel Ophüls, West Germany / France; 1972 Au Théâtre ce Soir, episode "La Pélerine écossaise," Pierre Sabbagh; 1976 La Jalousie, Raymond Rouleau; Désiré, Jeannette Hubert; Le Comédien, Jeannette Hubert; 1978 Au Théâtre ce Soir, episodes "Quadrille," "Le Nouveau Testament," Pierre Sabbagh; 1980 Mon Père avait raison, Paul-Robin Banhaïoun; 1982 Deburau, Jean Prat; 1984 Au

GUY, ALICE (July 1, 1873, Saint-Mandé, Val-de-Marne, France–March 24, 1968, Mahwah, New Jersey, USA)

The daughter of a book publisher, she started her professional life as a stenographer and typist at age sixteen. Hired as a secretary by Léon Gaumont in 1896, she shyly proposed to her boss writing a few playets to be performed by her friends. Gaumont agreed, and she became the world's first female director. Two years later, she was nominated chief of the Service des Théâtres de Prises de Vue. Until 1907, she was the queen of Gaumont Productions as a production director (more than 400 shorts), artistic director, and filmmaker. She allowed such important filmmakers as Etienne Arnaud, Victorin Jasset, and Louis Feuillade to make their directorial debuts. In 1907, she married the Englishman Herbert Blaché-Bolton, who ran Gaumont's British and German offices. The couple was sent to the USA to promote the Chronophone, a relative of talking pictures. It was a failure, and Herbert Blaché took over as the head of Gaumont's film development and print factory. The Blachés created their own production company, Solax, which financed almost 300 movies from 1910 to 1916, directed by Alice Guy herself and a few other filmmakers (1912 The Equine Spy, short, Edward Warren, USA; The Sewer, short, Edward Warren, USA; Dublin Dan, short, Edward Warren, Herbert Blaché, USA; 1913 Beasts of the Jungle, short, also screenwriter, Edward Warren, USA; 1915 The Shooting of Dan McGrew, short, Herbert Blaché, USA; Barbara Frietchie, short, Herbert Blaché, USA). Alice Guy founded her studios in Fort Lee and hired young beginners who soon became movie stars (notably Bessie Love, Wallace Reid, Alla Nazimova, and Ethel Barrymore and the future director Allan Dwan). Unfortunately, the Blachés lost control of Solax and divorced. In 1922, Alice Guy returned to France and settled in Nice with her children. After vainly trying to resume her film career, she had to earn her living writing short stories and tales for children. In 1964, she came back to the USA to live with one of her daughters in Mahwah, New Jersey. Other credits (as screenwriter): 1913 Kelly from the Emerald Isle (short, Edward Warren, USA); (as assistant director): 1920 Stronger Than Death (Herbert Blaché, Charles Bryant, Robert Z. Leonard, USA). Autobiography: 1976 Autobiographie d'une Pionnière du Cinéma, 1873–1968 (Collection Femme) (co-authors Nicole-Lise Bernheim, Claire Clouzot, Francis Lacassin; Editions Gonthier, Paris). In 1983, Caroline Huppert directed a TV biopic on her in which she was portrayed by Christine Pascal (Elle voulait faire du Cinéma). A documentary was also dedicated to her (1995 Jardin oublié: La Vie et l'oeuvre d'Alice Guy-Blaché / The Lost Garden: The Life and Cinema of Alice Guy-Blaché, Marquise Lepage, Canada / UK / France / Belgium / USA).

HADJADJ, BRUNO (Bruno Lévy Hadjadj / February 27, 1965, Sarcelles, Val-d'Oise, France–)

After studying applied arts at the ENSAAMA (Paris) and decorative arts at the ENSAD (Paris) and spending a short time at the Middlesex Polytechnic (London), he joined film decoration teams and worked as a builder, painter, sculptor, prop master, assistant, set designer, and art director. A plastic artist, he never stopped exhibiting his works all over the world. In the late 1990s, he lived in New York, where he associated with many members of the local independent cinema scene. These people created in him the desire to make a movie, and it took five years to complete it. His production designer credits include Petite Copine (short, Rodolphe Balaguer), 2001 Un Jeu d'Enfants (Laurent Tuel), and 2003 K.O. (short, Raphaël Frydman) and many commercials and music videos.

HAMMAN, JOË (Jean Hamman / October 26, 1883, Paris, France—June 30, 1974, Dieppe, Seine-Maritime, France)

Of Dutch descent, he was born and grew up in Paris. After completing his secondary studies in France and Great Britain, he moved to the USA, where he earned a living as a drawer and reporter. He became an accomplished cowboy working on ranches in Montana, mixing with Indians on reservations, and even meeting Buffalo Bill. Having returned to France to do his military service, he intended to become a painter but was soon captivated by cinema. He sold the screenplay of a western to Luxembourg. In 1907 and 1908, he wrote, directed, and performed about ten movies for the company. In 1909, the British film society Safety Bioscope Cie hired him to portray Buffalo Bill. Besides his own films, he starred in most of the westerns directed by Jean Durand. In 1912, he signed a contract with L'Eclipse for his most famous serial, Arizona Bill. He stopped directing in 1931 but pursued his acting career until the mid-1940s. His last appearance was in a film shot by newcomer Francis Leroi (Pop Game, 1966). He also illustrated books. Autobiography: 1962 Du Far West à Montmartre (Les Editeurs Français Réunis).

In the 1950s, he played mainly supporting roles and was often cast as a bad guy. From 1959 (La Valse du Gorille / US TV: Operation: Top Secret, Bernard Borderie) to 1968 (Da Berlino l'apocalisse / Le Tigre sort sans sa Mère / Heisses Pflaster für Spione, Mario Maffei, Italy / France / West Germany), he portrayed many secret agents. Under the pseudonym of Antoine Flachot, he created one of them, Le Tigre, and wrote the screenplays of Le Tigre aime la Chair fraîche / La tigre ama la carne fresca / UK: The Tiger Likes Fresh Blood / USA: Code Name: Tiger (France / Italy, 1964) and Le Tigre se parfume à la Dynamite / La Tigre profumata alla dinamite / El Tigre se perfume con dinamita / USA: An Orchid for the Tiger (France / Italy / Spain), both directed by Claude Chabrol. Besides his action films, he played in such memorable movies as A Bout de Souffle / UK: By a Tether / UK and USA: Breathless (Jean-Luc Godard, 1960), Rocco e i suoi fratelli / Rocco et ses Frères / UK and USA: Rocco and His Brothers (Luchino Visconti, Italy / France, 1960), and La marcia su Roma / La Marche sur Rome / UK and USA: March on Rome (Dino Risi, Italy / France, 1962). In 1971, he also co-starred with William Holden, Susan Hayward, Ernest Borgnine, and Woody Strode in an American western, The Revengers (Daniel Mann). More recently seen in comedy and dramatic roles, he has remained popular with French audiences thanks to a TV series, Navarro (106 episodes from 1989 to 2007). He wrote several novels (1983 L'Ours en Lambeaux, Editions Encre; 1985 Le Voyage d'Arsène, Editions Grasset; 1995 Les Sanglots de la Fête, Editions Grasset; 1998 Hôtel de Ville de la vieille Lune, Editions Grasset; 2007 Loin de Kharkov, Editions Grasset). His second wife was film producer Christine Gouze-Réнал (1914–2002). He was French President François Mitterrand's brother-in-law.
